that have tended to his preferment.
It was at a dinner given in Mr. Roosevelt's honor by Mrs. Henrietta Cohen that she told the story. Of in years, because of Theodore Roosevelt ception was Mrs. Rooseveit's bouldon allowed its folds to initiar to the breeze.

On the instant, almost, the hostile ensign was noted. In hot ordigention one observer pointed it out to amother and a mob speedily grew, as mobs will. Soon the street was cheked with augraphenole, who shook threatening fists at the confederate flag and inveighed most bitterly.

Alarmed by the gathering that was swelled at every moment and which directed its wrath against the home. Mr. Roosevelt sought the cause that had stirred the people to anger. He was not long in finding it. Flerce accelain directed his gaze, which rested upon the fluttering emblem of the upon the fluttering emblem of the south. The Roosevell nature has never qualled before a crowd. Theodore, the elder, saw that imminent danger could enter, saw that immining danger counterprobably be averted only through persuading his wife to remove the objectionable flag. With a word to the crowd he entered the house to find his wife. He told her what she already knew—that the anger of the mob had been excited by her indiscreet display of the southern colors, and said that it would be well for her to take in the dag.

"I shall not do so," said the mother of the president. "The flag is mine; the boulder is mine. I love the diag, for it represents my native land. No rufflan hand shall invade the ortizery of my boulder to drag down that flag, nor shall rufflan shouts force me to remove it from the window of a teem that I am a southern woman, that I love the south. Do anything year like except touch that flag. It shall not come down."

And it did not. Theodore Rosseyelt went again to face the crowd. He dwelt with finesse upon his wife's love for her mative land and moulded the for her native land and moulded the gathering to his will and to an indul-gence of Mrs. Roosevet in her dealre to fly the flag of her belove I south. The crowd dispersed. The story re-mains to show a maternal quality that has made a president.

The Face a Mask.

(Philadelphia Record.)
"Every time a notable crime is o "Every time a notable crime is committed." said a well known Philadelphia artist yesterday, "the criminal's ploture appears in all the newspapers, and expert medical men take his features as a text for their prattlings about degeneracy. It has been so in the case of young Czolgosz, whose assassination of President McKinley was, of course, a dastardly crime. 'His face shows what a wretch he is,' shout the medical men in the sensational press.' His face is the face of a degenerate.' Now, his face shows nothing of the kind, if the photographs I have seen are true to life. His face is that of an ordinary, everyday sort of boy, perhaps more pensive and thoughtful than most young men, but a type that is by most young men, but a type that is by no means uncommon. What can you tell from faces, anyhow? I have known people who were really degenerates with the faces of angels, and I have known men of villainous countenances who were mildness and goodness personified. After all, the face is little more than a mask? little more than a mask."
